FRUITS AND FLOWERS.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

Oh, Painter of the fruits and flowers,
We own Thy wise design,
Whereby these human hands of ours
May share the work of Thine!

Apart from Thee we plant in vain
The seed and sow the seed;
Thy early and Thy later rain,
Thy sun and dew we need.

Our toil is sweet with thankfulness,
Our burden is our boon;
The curse of earth's gray morning is
The blessing of its noon.

Why search the wide world everywhere
For Eden's unknown ground?
That garden of the primal pair
May never more be found.

But, blest by Thee, our patient toil
May right the ancient wrong,
And give to every clime and soil
The beauty lost so long.

Our homestead flowers and fruited trees
May Eden's orchard shame;
We taste the reuniting sweets of those
Lost Eve, without her blame.

From north and south and east and west,
The pride of every zone,
The fairest, rarest and the best
May all be made our own.

Its earliest shrines the young world sought
In hill-groves and in bowers;
The oldest offerings thither brought
Were thy own fruits and flowers.

And still with reverent hands we cull
Thy gifts each year renewed;
The [illegible] always beautiful—
The beautiful is good.

THE LECTURE.

"A lecture, eh?" said Deacon Hobson, as he stood entranced before the bulletin board of the Stub Mountain Lyceum. "And upon the 'Rights of Woman?' Well, I swan! Mrs. Hobson, she'll be a-wantin' to hear it, an' I shouldn't wonder, if Jemima Ann set up her dander, she'd go into the bargain. Gals is always racin' after every new idee. And p'raps it's a good thing to stir us country folks up—a rousin' good lecture once in a while. Tickets 25 cents. Wal, I'll think about it."

"A lecture? said Dr. Briggs, the newly fledged M. D., who had just hung out his glittering blue-and-gold sign; "and respecting woman's rights? I cannot say that I approve of the subject; but a new-comer like myself must show himself in public, and there are so few opportunities in Stub Mountain. Upon the whole, I think that I will take a ticket."

"Woman's rights?" said old Mrs. Mix, who was always tormenting the Selectmen for the privilege of franchise on election day, and who went out to gather her own hay, in harvest time, with a man's boots and rather more than a man's strength. "I'm powerful glad on't! The subject needs agitation in a place like this, where there's wus than Egyptian darkness. I'll go if it costs me a whole week's butter money!"

And thus, in various styles from various motives, the Stub Mountaineers commented on and approved of the lecture which was to be delivered at the lyceum on that Wednesday evening.

Squire Dooley stroked his long beard as he checked his gray pony before the village store.

"I suppose my girls will insist on going," said he; "but there are so few things going on at Stub Mountain that it seems a pity to deny them a little recreation."

And the landlord of the Stub Mountain hotel chuckled.

"It was an ill wind that blew good to nobody," he said, "and any popular sensation was good for business."

This was a Tuesday. Upon the Wednesday morning a stout gentleman in a chaise drew up to the hotel and strutted up to the bar, with a very rubicund face and little, fiery eyes.

"Mary Smith lectures here to-night?" said he.

"I guess you're about right there, Squire," said the landlord, feeling in his pocket for the bundle of tickets which the lyceum committee had authorized him to sell. "A popular subject, too. You can read all about it on the bulletin board out there, and—"

"I forout it!" said the stout gentleman, growing redder and more apoplectic with every moment.

"Land o' Goshen!" ejaculated the landlord.

"She is my wife," said the stranger. "My name is Smith—Zerubbabel Smith—and I won't be disgraced by any of this public-lecturing nonsense."

"Yes, I know," said the landlord; "but I don't believe the law will uphold ye in it, Squire, after the tickets are sold and—"

"Hang the law!" shouted Mr. Zerubbabel Smith, bringing his gloved fist down among the glasses with a bang. "I don't care two straws for the law! My wife is my wife, and I won't have her making a Merry Andrew of herself here or anywhere else! When do you expect her?"

"The room was engaged from 12 o'clock," faltered the landlord; "but—"

"Very well," roared the red-faced man, "I'll just go and stroll around the village, and you let me know when she arrives—d'ye hear?"

Mr. Zerubbabel Smith had hardly betaken himself to the shadow of the old elms on the village green, when an elderly woman of a starched appearance came in, with a striped carpet-bag on one arm, and carrying a gingham umbrella in the other hand.

"Is this the Stub Mountain Lyceum?" said she, primly.

"No, marm!" said the landlord "This 'ere's the tavern. The lyceum ain't open till 8 o'clock. Want to buy tickets for the lecture?"

"Certainly not!" said the elderly female.

"P'raps you'd like to engage a room," said the landlord, with a glance at the carpet-bag.

"Nothing of the sort!" said the lady. The font of the landlord's imagination was hopelessly drained dry by this time. He said nothing more, but stared hard at the starched female.

"I wish to see Miss Smith," said she, abruptly.

"Eh?" said the landlord.

"The lecturer on—Women's Rights," with a little grimace at the words, as if they had a bitter taste.

"She ain't arriv' yet," said the landlord.

"I do not intend to allow this outrage on public taste!" said the lady, vehemently.

"Marm?" said the landlord.

"I am Miss Smith's mother!"

"Be you?" gasped mine host.

"And here I set until she presents herself," said Mrs. Smith, depositing herself on the nearest chair, and clasping both hands firmly over the umbrella handle.

The landlord looked feebly at her, and almost within the same second in hurried a short, over-dressed lady, with curls, jewelry, bangles and a scarlet shawl while a shabby black-silk skirt trailed its flounces over the dusty floor.

"Landlord," said she, "take down those posters at once!"

"What for, marm?" cried the poor man.

"It's swindling!" said the curly fair one; "downright swindling! We are strangers, and Miss Smith is to lecture nowhere unless I sing ballads in the intermissions. It's share and share alike in the profits and the expenses, and I won't be cheated! And so you may tell her, landlord!"

The landlord smote his forehead in despair.

"Be I goin' crazy?" he said, "or is the whole 'varsal world agee? Miss Smith ain't here, nor Mary Smith ain't, nor Mrs. Smith, nor none of the Smiths, as I know of!"

"Landlord," said the curly lady, screwing up her thin lips, "you are in the conspiracy against me!"

The landlord uttered a groan.

"I wish to goodness I'd never heard of the whole thing," said he.

"But if there's law and justice in the land, I'll have my rights!" screamed the excited lady. "I'll telegraph to Boston to a lawyer. I'll have up the constable. I'll—"

The landlord was vaguely considering in his own mind whether it was best to go under the counter, escape by the back window or seize his grandfather's rusty musket from the iron hook where it hung above the chimney piece, and defy the whole party then and there, when a merciful Providence interfered in his behalf. The depot hack rumbled up to the door, and out stepped a tall, pretty young woman with deep blue eyes and bronze-brown hair, a French gray traveling dress and a marvelously composed manner.

"Mary Smith!" said she to the landlord. "Are my rooms ready? I lecture here to-night in the lyceum."

"Never was so glad to see nobody in my born days," croaked the landlord. "Yes, the rooms is ready; but your husband, he's out on the green, and your mother's here a-waitin' to forbid the banns, and your gardner a-vowin' and a-swearin' she's been swindled, and—"

"It's some mistake," said Miss Smith, in her clear, incisive voice. "I have no husband. My mother has been dead seven years, and a partner is a luxury in which I have never indulged myself."

"This ain't my daughter!" said the starched female. "My Mary Smith has red hair, and she stutters."

"Quite a different sort of person from my partner," said the lady with the red shawl.

"And my wife weighs 200 pounds, and she wears the Bloomer costume," unwillingly confessed the stout person, who had by this time come in from the green, and was standing staring in the doorway.

The landlord heaved a mighty sigh of relief.

"Wal," said he, "I don't see but that the lectur' may go on, after all."

The three discontented spirits vanished. Miss Smith retreated to her room, and the landlord breathed freely again.

But in the afternoon train from Boston a young man in the undress uniform of a naval officer, came unexpectedly upon the scene.

"Is this the place where Mary Smith lectures to-night?" he asked of the landlord.

"I believe so," said that worthy, secretly wondering if there were any more relations to object. "Ef you want to speak to her, there she is out in the back gurding, reading poetry under the pear trees."

"Polly," said the young officer, leaning over the pretty, French gray shoulder.

"I hear you," said Miss Smith, turning over a leaf and pretending not to be aware of the pink flush which was overspreading her cheek.

"Are you really determined to go on with this public-lecturing tour?" he asked, quietly.

"Why shouldn't I?" cross-questioned Miss Smith.

"Because I don't like it, Polly."

"You quarreled with me," said Mary.

"I beg pardon," said the young officer, "you quarreled with me!"

"Do you really care?" said Mary Smith, melting into softness.

"I care more than you will ever know!" he answered, fervently. "Polly, I love you! And as for women's rights, you shall have every right you wish, if only you'll give up this lecturing business and marry me!"

She smiled—hesitated—visibly yielded.

"But I've made the engagement."

"Break it, then," said the officer. "The clergyman lives just across the green—I had his house pointed out to me. Let's go there this very minute and get married!"

Mary Smith laughed and blushed, and burst into tears, and finally put her hand into that of the naval officer.

"Have it your own way," said she. "But I don't know what the public will say."

"Henceforward," said Capt. Lacy, "I am to be your public. And my verdict is entirely in your favor."

So there was no lecture in the Stub Mountain Lyceum that night. And the stout man went home, where he found his wife and mother-in-law in a grenage, the starched female proceeded to the nearest camp-meeting, and the curly ballad-singer composed a new song called "Love's [illegible]" from the incident from real life which had just transpired.

"After all," said the bride, "Smith is an awkward name. And I'm glad I've changed it to Lacy."

MUSTARD.

Before the year 1729 mustard was little known, according so the Grocers' Journal, at English tables. About this time an old woman of the name of Clements, residing in Durham, began to grind the seed in a mill, and to pass the flour through several processes necessary to free in from its husks. She kept her secret to herself for many years, during which she sold large quantities throughout the country, but especially in London. Here it was introduced to the royal table, where it received the approval of George I. From the circumstances of Mrs. Clements being a resident at Durham, it obtained the name of Durham mustard. The manufacture of mustard consisted in simply grinding the seed into a very fine flour, a bushel of seed, weighing sixty pounds, yielding twenty-eight pounds to thirty pounds of flour of mustard. A false taste, however, arose for having an improved color, and the flour of mustard was introduced from which the oil had been abstracted. Hence other materials, such as capsicum powder, tumeric, terra alba, wheaten flour, etc., are added to bring up the flavor and to increase the bulk.

DE GOOD, OLD-FASHIONED FOLKS.

"What I am longing arter," said Brother Gardner of the Lime-Kiln Club, "what I am longin' arter am a sight of a good, old-fashioned man or woman—sich as we could find in every house thirty y'ars ago, but sich as cannot be found now in a week's hunt. It makes me lonesome when I realize dat our old-fashioned men an' wimin am no mo'. In de days gone by if I fell sick one woman would run in wid catnip, anoder wid horseradish leaves, anoder wid a bowl o' gruel, an' fears would be shed, an' kind words spoken, an' one couldn't stay sick to save him. In dose good ole days de kaliker dress an' white apron abounded. An honest woman wasn't afeard to wash her face on account of de powder. Every woman wore her own ha'r, an' she wore it to please herself instead of fashion. Thick shoes kept de feet dry, thick clothes kept de body warm, an' dar was no winkin' and wobblin' an' talkin' frew de toef.

"Dar' was goodness made land in dem good ole days. Dar' was prayin' to God, an' de hearts meant it. De woman who wore a No. 6 shoe was as good as de woman wid a foot all pinched out of shape and livered wid corns. You didn't h'ar much 'bout breach of promise cases and other devilry. De man who parts his ha'r in de middle an' b'lieves he washes his victims by de score wasn't ho'n den. People didn't let deir nayburs die under deir noses widout eben knowin' dat sickness had come to de family. Men worked hard an' put in full time, an' woman foun' sunthin' to do beside gaddin' de streets to show off a small foot or a new bonnet.

"De world sails it progress. We must shet our hearts against our nayburs, sacrifice all fur fashion, conceal our limps and pains, appear what we am not, an' when we go to de grave fur rest we am forgotten in a week. Whar' one woman looks to heaben a dozen looks to fashion. Whar' one man helps de poo' from kindness of heart a dozen chip in because de list of names will be published in de paper. When I sot down of an evenin' and fink dese fings ober it makes me sad. I doan' know jist how wicked Sodom was, nor what devilry dey was up to in Gomorrah, but if either town had mo' vanity, wickedness, frivolity an' deceit dan Detroit, Chicago, Buffalo or any odder city in dis kentry, rents mus' have bin awful high."—Detroit Free Press.

DEATH BY TELEGRAPH.

The discussion of electric-light dangers springs up or breaks out often and in numerous places. A scientist and expert was asked if a man's life was in danger when his body was exposed to the current of electricity necessary to feed the electric light. His reply was that no man knew the extent of the danger, or rather the extent of the injury that might be incurred. If a man should place his hands upon the wire before the generator started and keep them there until the machine stopped, as he might be obliged to whether he wanted to or not, since the muscles would contract very strongly—if he did this, it is believed that he would be comparatively safe; but if his hands were removed, if they could be, or if the wire should break while the generator was in operation, he would receive an induction spark that might kill him and might not. That would depend on what part was affected and upon the man's physical condition. It might paralyze the heart, it might cause strangulation, and in any case would be likely to cause more or less derangement of the nervous system. But the positive or definite result will not be known, cannot be known, except by actual experience. Some light may be thrown upon it by experiments on lower animals. Even then man may not be satisfied, and proceed to test and perhaps kill himself. Then we shall know, and possibly not till then.—Providence Journal.

THE colored leads used in automatic pencils are said to be made of poisonous aniline material. A Schenectady man, while taking a chew of tobacco from his vest pocket, unconsciously put a fragment of lead from his pocket into his mouth. He noticed a peculiar taste and rinsed his mouth. While at supper soon after he was taken very sick, and continued to retch and vomit several hours, when he was relieved.

FOGG has a new way of turning a compliment now and then. Seeing the elderly Miss Pangley in the street the other day, he tried to avoid her, but did not succeed. When they met, said Miss Pangley: "Oh, you naughty man! You wanted to cut me!" Replied Fogg, blandly: "I should be cutting a pretty figure, wouldn't I?" Miss Pangley tells her friend, Miss Sagegreen, that Mr. Fogg is a perfect gentleman.—Boston Transcript.

JUDGE WIGGIN.

Since our last issue the people of this county have been much exercised over the appointment of a committee of the Assembly to investigate charges that have been preferred against Superior Judge M. P. Wiggin, with a view to his impeachment. These charges are based on the report of the last Grand Jury of this county, which reported that he had charged and was paid $500 for giving legal advice to the Board of Supervisors; that he had ordered paid into the Probate Court $1,908 belonging to an estate under his charge as Probate Judge and had not accounted for it, and had refused to settle the administration of the estate and discharge the Administrator, but had continued the case for one year, in the meantime holding on to the money. And it is said that charges will be preferred against him for borrowing money from parties having suits in his Court.—The Assembly Committee is investigating the charges, and have our County Clerk, Treasurer, J. N. Summers, and others, before it as witnesses. Judge Wiggin has been before the Committee and made his statement. He holds that he had a right to charge and receive a fee from the Board of Supervisors for legal advice given that body on matters that were not likely to come before him as a Judge, but admitted that it was bad taste in him to do so. In regard to the little matter of $1,908, he stated that he had deposited with County Treasurer Tinkum a certified check for $1,500, and the balance was on deposit in his own private bank account, and he was ready to pay it over whenever the proper claimant appeared, but admitted that he did not deposit the check till the grand jury had reported on the subject. It is likely that the Committee will report to the Assembly, either to dismiss the complaint or present articles of impeachment to the Senate, within a few days. If articles of impeachment are presented, the Senate, presided over by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, will proceed to his trial, the Senators acting as jurors. As the evidence stands it looks dark for the Judge, but a man is considered innocent until he is found guilty, so we should be charitable, and give the accused the benefit of all doubts. If the Senate should find him guilty he will be removed from the Bench, and be debarred from holding any position of honor or profit in the State. On the Bench, Judge Wiggin has been courteous to all having business in his Court; he has always been prompt in his rulings, and his most important decisions have been affirmed by the Supreme Court. As a Judge he has been well liked, but has lately gained some unpopularity on account of absenting himself from the county so much.

Senator Miller had the opium clause in the Tariff bill amended to make the duty on crude opium $1 per pound, to apply to opium containing more than 9 per cent. of morphia, the importation of opium containing less than 10 per cent. of morphia being prohibited. Senator Miller explained that smoking opium was made from crude opium containing less than 9 per cent. of morphia. If it contains more than that, it is too costly for the purpose, and cannot be turned into smoking opium without a loss. The duty on smoking opium was raised from $6 to $10 a pound.

The deposit in the Humboldt mine, on the Central Pacific, is pure sulphur, and has to be blasted. Each blast sets it on fire, but they are prepared for this, and advance and throw water on the burning brimstone. During the burning it is hell on earth.

A sewing-machine agent, J. C. Boulan, has eloped with the wife of Myram Young, of Truckee. The woman is represented to be of remarkable beauty, about 22 years of age, and had borne a good reputation. She left a note for her husband that she was going to her old home in Maine, but she went as far as Verdi, where she took the return train for Sacramento, Boulan meeting her at Dutch Flat. Mr. Young is highly respected.

THE MASQUERADE BALL.—The Masquerade Ball to be given at Allen House, on Thursday evening next—Washington's Birthday, is the all absorbing topic of conversation among our ball goers, and promises to be a fine affair. A large number of costumes have been ordered from San Francisco, and many rich and elaborate ones are being made at home. Porter's Band will be in attendance.

NEW SUPERVISOR.—After much trouble and vexation of spirits, A. C. Raymond, of Bodie, having been appointed Supervisor by the Governor, vice J. B. Fort, resigned, has filed his bond, which was sent to Sacramento for approval by Judge Wiggin. This appointment is acceptable to all parties.

DENTISTRY.—Under "New To-Day" will be found the card of Dr. E. G. Winnie, surgeon dentist, of Bodie, who is a fine operator and gives his patients general satisfaction. Those so unfortunate as to require the services of a dentist should give Dr. Winnie a call.

JUNKETING.—County Clerk Miller, Treasurer Tinkum, and Jesse N. Summers are in Sacramento to be examined by the Legislative Committee that is investigating Judge Wiggin.

It is very near the size of the half eagle, and one side is very much of the same appearance. On the center of the other side is a large V, surrounded with a wreath, with the words United States of America and E Pluribus Unum encircling the wreath inside the milling.

[COMMUNICATED]

EDITORS OF CHRONICLE-UNION:—Having noticed the following in the Bodie Free Press of the 8th inst.:

"Were it not for Thomas Paine's patriotism, it would be difficult to awaken much enthusiasm at the celebration of his birthday. It is but 145 years since he was born, and yet his infidel theories have lost their hold upon the mind of intelligent men, and new theories have taken their place among the opponents of Chistianity."

I would like through your columns to ask a few questions, and make a few remarks in answer to the above. I inquire as to what his patriotism consisted, and what were his infidel theories that modern opponents of Christianity have thrown aside for new ones? I will briefly state in what I conceive his patriotism to have consisted, and also his religious theories, so if I am in er or the author of the above will have an opportunity of setting me right. His patriotism, according to my ideas, consisted in breaking the chains of Kingcraft and teaching man toleration in religious matters. The last was a necessity of the times, for it was impossible to succeed in breaking the fetters of Kingcraft so long as the people were intolerant and warring on religious matters. He succeeded in both, as the Constitution of the United States attests—the greatest, most important and beneficial achievement to man in the history of the world. His religious theory was, in his own words, "The world is my country, and to do good is my religion." It is quite beyond my conception how modern freethinkers, or opponents of Christianity, can improve upon or afford to throw aside so lofty, noble and sublime a theory. He also believed in a Deity to absolute conviction. I am aware that there are now, as then, freethinkers, or opponents to Christianity, who do not believe in a Deity.

FACT SEEKER.

BODIE ITEMS.

The ball of the Neptune and Champion Hose Companies on Monday night was well attended by the sterner sex, but the fairer portion of the community was sparsely represented. This was owing to an impression that existed among the best people of Bodie that it would be a hoodlum affair. A volunteer fireman should be as much of a gentleman as a National Guardsman, and the self-sacrificing spirit that leads one to voluntary enter a service beset with dangers to life and limb, and health, should entitle the fireman to as much consideration and respect that communities usually accord to the "gold-soldier boy," the "feather-bed National Guardsman of California. The ball, however, was a success. The music was very fine, and is said to have been the best ever furnished at a ball in Bodie. Wilson & Hill, of the Bodie House, gave one of the finest ball suppers ever spread in that town, and it was greatly enjoyed by a large number of guests. A fine supper was also given at the Champion Hotel by Mrs. M. Schafer.

On Wednesday evening—St. Valentine's Day—a musicale and ball came off in Miners' Union Hall under the auspices of Pro Bono Publico Lodge, No. 346, I. O. O. G. T. The musical and literary exercises consisted of "Sing Ye Jehovah's Praise," which was well sung by Mrs Humphreys, Mrs. Johns, Mrs. Jennie De Vol, Miss Eva Parsons, and Messrs. Sparrow, Nelson, Chandler and Cook. Mrs. Gregory recited in a very creditable manner, "The Famine" Then followed a duet on the piano by Mrs. Humphreys and Mrs. Johns, which showed them to be fine musicians. "The Curfew Shall Not Ring To-Night" was recited by Miss Lizzie Wittman in a manner that merited and received the fullest applause.—Miss Ella Waldrip sang very prettily "Fishes in the Sea," and was applauded to the echo, the bachelor element in the large audience being seemingly pleased and encouraged at learning there "Are as good fish in the sea as ever were caught," while a number of the fair sex were correspondingly depressed in spirit on hearing that "many of them are never caught." A grand march was played on the piano by Mrs. Humphreys and Miss Edith Forrest. After a solo by Mrs. De Vol, assisted by a full chorus, this portion of the entertainment was finished by Miss Katie Rosenthal reciting "Virginius" in a manner that elicited great applause, and for an encore she recited "Guilty, or Not Guilty." The floor was then cleared for dancing, a pastime that was indulged in by a large number till a late hour. The entire entertainment was very enjoyable, and a credit to the Good Templars, who number about 90 members, the Lodge being in a very flourishing condition.

Great preparations are making for the masquerade ball of the three P's on Washington's Birthday.

D. V. Goodson and wife arrived home from the East yesterday.

In visiting Bodie, our Bridgeport friends should be careful if they hope for showers of blessings on their heads—not to do anything calculated to "break the glasses' of a near-sighted friend, as it might require something more than a promise to "buy a new pair!" to subdue the hard feelings likely to arise therefrom.

GEORGE PECK asserts in his Sun that "a peculiar suit for damages against a newspaper is liable to be commenced against an alleged funny paper not a million miles from Milwaukee. An advertisement was contracted for in which a bald head and a head with plenty of hair was to appear. One was to be labeled "Before using," and the other "After using." The newspaper man, either by mistake or for fun, put the legend "Before using" under the head that had plenty of hair, and "After using" under the picture of the bald head. It is said to have been as good as a can-can to see the owner of the bald-headed remedy, when he saw the way the newspaper had mixed those children up."

CONGRESSIONAL SUICIDES.

There have been a number of members of Congress who have committed suicide.

Haywood Chauncy Riddle shot himself through the head, in Tennessee, about 1875. He was undoubtedly insane.

James Blair, a Representative from South Carolina, blew out his brains at a boarding-house on Capitol Hill, April 1, 1834.

Felix McConnell, a member from Alabama, committed suicide, in a fit of delirium, at the St. Charles Hotel, Washington, by stabbing himself and then cutting his throat, Sept. 10, 1846.

Representative James Ashmore, from South Carolina, blew out his brains at Shields, Miss., Dec. 6, 1861.

Elijah Hise, Representative in the Fortieth Congress, committed suicide at Russellville, Ky., May 8, 1876.

John White, Representative from Kentucky, committed suicide at Richmond, Ky., Sept. 27, 1815.

James G. Wilson, United States Senator from New Jersey, threw himself from his house, in a fit of delirium, in 1832, and was killed.

William Ramsey, Representative from Pennsylvania, committed suicide at Barnum's Hotel, in Baltimore, by shooting himself through the eye with a pistol, about 1849.

John Ewing, of Indiana, was found dead in his room at Vincennes in 1839, and on his table the following epitaph:

Here lies a man who loved his friends,
His God, his country, and Vincennes.

Representative Alfred B. White, of Ohio, committed suicide by taking poison on the grave of his two children, at Columbus, Aug. 1, 1865. He was charged with improper acts in connection with cotton speculations.

James Henry Lane, United States Senator from Kansas, committed suicide at Fort Leavenworth, about 1866.

James S. Johnson, Representative from Kentucky, committed suicide while suffering from ill health, at Owensboro, Ky., Feb. 12, 1873.

ACCIDENTALLY KILLED.

A number of Congressmen and ex-Congressmen have met with accidental deaths.

Clement L. Vallandigham died from the accidental discharge of a pistol in 1870, while arguing a murder case at Lebanon, Ohio.

Robert Young, United States Senator from Indiana, was killed by a railroad train while walking on the track, at Indianapolis, Nov. 14, 1856.

Abraham B. Venable, United States Senator from Virginia, perished in the burning of the Richmond Theater, Dec. 21, 1811.

James Martin, Representative from South Carolina, was drowned on the passage from New Orleans to Galveston, Nov. 15, 1857. He was the founder of the Southern Quarterly Review.

Josiah Stoddard Johnson, Senator from Louisiana, died May 19, 1813, from the effect of an explosion of gunpowder on a steam packet on the Red river.

Charles J. Julian, Senator from Delaware, died Oct. 17, 1862, from injuries received while experimenting with a rifle-cannon which he had invented.

HOMICIDES.

There have been members of Congress who have killed men not on the field of honor.

Henry Daniels, from Virginia, shot his brother-in-law at Mount Sterling, Ky., in 1845, as the result of a quarrel.

Daniel Sickles killed Philip Barton Key, Feb. 28, 1859.

Richard Weightman, a Delegate from New Mexico in the Thirty-second Congress, killed a Santa Fe trader with the same knife with which he cut a cadet comrade at West Point—an act for which he was expelled from West Point.

IT is stated that 2,252 women are engaged in farming in the State of Indiana. It has not been reported how successful they are, but it is hardly to be expected that if the first 1,000 had failed, that the second 1,000 would have gone into the business.

AN Eastern journal states that "paper made from strong fibers can now be compressed into a substance so hard that nothing but a diamond can scratch it." How the editor verified the diamond part of the story is not known.

THE editor of a journal in Gustemala printed an article which gave offense to Minister Logan. The latter complained to President Barrios, who at once arrested the offending journalist and suspended the publication of his paper.

A WESTERN editor, in response to a subscriber who grumbles that his paper is "infernally damp, says "that is because there is so much due on it."

AN agricultural exchange says: "Purnips are said to be fattening for hogs, but we have never tried them ourself."

NO PERSON has a right to live without labor.

THE UNION.

BRIDGEPORT, FEBRUARY 17, 1883.

FARM AND HOME.

Farm Hakings.

TREE BEANS.—In some parts of Texas tree beans are sold as feed for horses. A certain kind of locust bean is used, both green and dry, in the South of Spain for horses' feed.

OATS FOR PROFIT.—A subscriber asks how he can make oats a paying crop? By giving thorough cultivation and applying plenty of manure. Also give attention to the proper rotation, and do not raise oats on the same spot year after year.

SWEET POTATO HAY.—A Southern writer says: "Sweet-potato vines make a rather inferior hay, which stock will eat when nothing better is to be had. Gather the vines just before the time for frost and throw them up into small cocks or stacks for a few days to sweat. This toughens the leaves and prevents crumbling off in handling. After this dry the vines and store them away under shelter for use."

QUITTER.—Quitter is caused by pricking with a nail, or by the horse resting with the toe of one foot and bearing with the heel of the shoe of that foot (especially should the shoe be calked) upon the coronet of the opposite one. Hence unshod horses can with difficulty get quitter. Neither do they. An unshod horse "feels his feet" and knows what he is doing with them, so he scarcely knows what it is to over-reach himself, and even if he does such a thing no evil consequences are ever noticed, because the horn cannot inflict injury like iron.—Horses and Roads.

MILLET.—Common millet, says the Prairie Farmer, grows to the height of three or four feet, and bears a loose panicle of seeds hanging on one side. German millet has numerous succulent leaves, is larger and considered more nutritious than common millet. The leaves remain green until the seed matures. Pearl millet is known under various names, as Egyptian millet, etc. It was sent out by the Agricultural Department at Washington in 1879 as a new variety, but proved to be a variety that had been previously cultivated in the extreme Southern States. The testimony of farmers and planters is that it is of little value unless cut as a green forage. It grows rapidly and is eaten with relish by stock, but if allowed to attain full growth or produce seed it becomes useless for hay. It is more exhaustive to the soil than either common millet or German millet. The yield per acre varies largely with different soils and other conditions. Common millet may be sown at any time before the 25th of June in this latitude. If sown early it usually is mature in August. Eight quarts per acre of seed is sown if intended chiefly for cattle feed. Hungarian is the most productive, and is much more generally cultivated than the common millet. The quantity of seed recommended for pear millet per acre varies largely in different localities. It should be drilled in.

BEE CULTURE.—If any one should find a fertile worker in a colony, says a writer in the Bee Journal, let him try the following experiment: Shake the bees from all but one or two combs during the day, and at night, when the bees are quiet, remove the hive to a new stand and put a new hive with the combs taken from the old colony on the old stand. In the morning the bees will commence to go back to the old stand, and, after a sufficient number of them have returned, give them a queen cell and brood in all stages. The bees in a colony having a fertile worker are, of course, nearly all old bees, and so will nearly all return to the old stand. The fertile worker and a few bees will remain, which can be destroyed or united with the colony after the queen is established. This manner of treatment reminds me of a very sure way to introduce queens. Remove the hive to to a new stand and place a hive containing a frame or two of brood on the old stand. After all the old bees have returned to the old stand, introduce the queen to the young bees left in the hive, and after she has commenced to lay take the hive off the old stand and return the old hive containing the queen. The old bees will return gradually, but so few returning at a time, and they finding the queen so quiet on the combs, do not offer to touch her. This is the way I introduce imported queens and all those which I do not wish to run any risk on.

SOILING.—A correspondent of the Iowa Homestead, who keeps five cows on five acres of ground, from which, besides supplying his family with milk and cream, he manufactures 1,300 pounds of butter annually and raises a calf from each cow, thus describes how he does it: "I have five acres, about two and three-fourths in pasture, mostly blue grass. I have a strip fourteen rods long and four rods wide that consists of timothy and clover, which I cut twice and sometimes three times a season. As soon as it will do to cut I feed it regularly to the cows twice each day, and it lasts till the corn is ready for use. There is a strip fourteen rods long and ten rods wide which I plant with sweet corn for fodder. I made a dropper that I attach to a two-horse planter, which makes the stalks about two inches apart in the row. I plant at three different times, so as to have it early and late. About the 1st of July I commence to thin out, leaving a stalk about once in a foot. By the time I get over the piece, that which is left is nearly all eared out. Then I commence cutting it up clean. When I get it half cut up I plow the ground and sow winter rye. I sow the balance as soon as the corn is off. This makes good pasture late in the fall and early in the spring. We feed our cows six quarts of corn-meal and bran, mixed equal parts by weight, each day. This is the way I summer five cows on five acres, and have done so for three years past. I manure the ground high, and that is what makes good crops."

Domestic Economy.

AMMONIA TO DESTROY WORMS.—Worms may be effectually driven out of our flour pits by ammonia water used to water the plants once a week—an ounce of ammonia in a gallon of warm water.

ECONOMY IN USE OF SOAP.—A nice soft soap for washing dishes can be secured by placing in an old dish (and occasionally adding water) all the scraps and bits of hard soap which are too small to use for washing.

THE RIGHT WAY TO COOK STEAK.—Broil steak without salting. Salt draws the juice in cooking. It is desirable to keep this in if possible. Cook over a hot fire, turning frequently, searing on both sides. Place on a platter. Salt and pepper to taste.

NEW KETTLES.—To remove the iron taste from new kettles, boil a handful of hay in them, and repeat the process if necessary. Hay water is a great sweetener of tin, wooden and iron ware. In Irish dairies everything used for milk is scalded with hay water.

HARD SAUCE FOR PLUM PUDDING.—Take by measure three spoonfuls of butter—a slightly salt butter is best; mix this thoroughly with nine table-spoonfuls of powdered white sugar; beat it very thoroughly until it is quite white and light; add to it the juice of one lemon, a wineglassful of brandy or rum, and a table-spoonful of nutmeg; mix very thoroughly; cannot be made thoroughly in less than a half-hour; keep in a cold place.

POUND PLUM PUDDING.—One pound of chopped beef suet, one of bread crumbs, one of currants, one of moist sugar, one of raisins, the last to be chopped with suet; two ounces of candied lemon-peel, and two of citron, some grated nutmeg, ground cloves and cinnamon; wet with six eggs and a little brandy; mix all well together; put the mixture into a buttered bowl, tie it up in a cloth, and boil seven or eight hours. Serve with wine sauce.

MINCE PIES.—Take two pounds fresh tongue, or lean fresh beef, two pounds suet, all chopped fine, five pounds apples, two pounds raisins, seeded and chopped, and two pounds currants; after they are washed and carefully picked over, add one and a half pounds citron, chopped very fine, one quart brandy, one quart wine and one wineglass rose-water; one table-spoonful salt, one teaspoonful white pepper, one scant table-spoonful cloves, two and a half table-spoonfuls cinnamon, one table-spoonful mace, two nutmegs grated, one table-spoonful allspice, the juice and grated rind of two oranges, one lemon and two and a half pounds sugar. Mix the meat and suet together, then add the salt and pepper, next the spices, then the apple and fruit, then the grated peel and juice of the oranges and lemons. Dissolve the sugar in the brandy and wine and stir all thoroughly together. Mince meat made from this recipe will keep all winter, if it is put in a closely-covered stone jar and kept in a cold cellar. If the meat does not seem moist enough a little boiled or fresh cider can be added as the pies are made; or you may use the liquid in which the meat is boiled in place of so much brandy and wine as is necessary to moisten the mince meat.

HOW TO QUIET AN AUDIENCE.

When Madame Boisgontier was playing at the Follies Dramatiques, Paris, she confessed to having had the very bad habit of keeping the stage waiting. One evening, after having been repeatedly called without effect, the manager burst into her dressing-room, apoplectic with passion.

"Madame Boisgontier," said he, "you are laughing at the audience!"

"And why not?" said she; "they are laughing at me."

"You're not ready," he cried. "What is to be done?"

"Throw that cap," said madame, pointing to a wide-awake he held in his hand, "into the gallery; there'll be a fight, and that will occupy them for a time."

The cap of discord was thrown, and produced its effect. Two minutes were gained, but still Madame Boisgontier was not ready.

"Madame Boisgontier, this is intolerable," exclaimed the manager. "Only listen to the voice of the public. It's worse than any menagerie at feeding time. They are tearing up the benches."

"Nonsense!" said the actress. "Send out for a franc's worth of apples, and pelt the pit. I'll pay for them."

It was an inspiration. The apples produced the effect, together with some bruises, and were devoured on the spot. As the last morsel disappeared, Madame Boisgontier, radiant with beauty, made her entree amid the plaudits of a delighted house.

The German proverb, "If I rest, I rust," is Americanized to read, "If I trust, I bust."

THE NOISE OF THE FINGER.

Dr. Hammond says that when you poke the end of your finger in your ear the roaring noise you hear is the sound of the circulation in your finger, which is a fact, as any one can demonstrate for himself by first putting his fingers in his ears, and then stopping them up with other substance. Try it, and think what a wonder of a machine your body is, that even the points of your fingers are such busy workshops that they roar like a small Niagara. The roaring is probably more than the noise of the circulation of the blood. It is the voice of all the vital processes together—the tearing-down and building-up processes that are always going forward in every living body from conception to death.

THE law of the harvest is to reap more than you sow. Sow an act, and you reap a habit; sow a habit, and you reap a character; sow a character, and you reap a destiny.

NEVER fear that damaging reports will alienate a true friend. Your grief will be his grief—your sorrow his sorrow. Any other kind of a friend is not worth having, let him go.

ONIONS.—The tops of onions should be broken over close to the ground to prevent their running to seed.
